COWYN BUILDING GROUP

Ravenswood Senior Learning Centre, GORDON

This distinctive building is situated prominently on the school campus on the corner of the Pacific Highway and Cecil Street, Gordon. The standard of construction, both internally and externally, is extremely high, with the whole feel of the building being one of calm, befitting students in their last years of secondary school. The builder's attention to detail is noticeable, with quality timber joinery internally and precise weathered copper screens fixed to the outside of the building. These copper screens, which were slow and painstaking to erect, when completed, effectively locked off the facade for man and materials access during the latter stages of construction. Additionally, being positioned on the Pacific Highway, access to the site was limited by traffic constraints and also by the limited site area, effectively allowing no real materials storage on site, and no access for trucks and trailers. Finally, this modern standout building was connected to two other older existing buildings, for student/teacher access, with the builder working very closely with the school to minimise school disruption.
